With growing concerns surrounding Coronavirus the need for more immediate health care will increase. Swiftspace makes a simple solution for “pop-up” medical stations that can be stored and brought out when needed. Stations provide privacy while also leaving room for doctors to maneuver around patients. These stations would be a good solution for testing stations. They are also suited towards triaging patients to speed up the intake process or for less serious concerns such as vaccination stations.